

First weekend back sees restaurant sales rise above 2019 levels

- Saturday saw sales numbers 29% higher than the same Saturday in 2019
- The week (Monday through Friday) saw sales average at 14% lower than the same week in 2019 despite only outdoor dining being open

London, April 19, According to restaurant analytics platform Tenzo, the first week of trading since outdoor reopening has seen sales come close to and exceed 2019 levels. For locations able to open, the first five weekdays back (Monday, 12th April to Friday, 16th April) saw sales climb back up to -14% of the same week in 2019, but the weekend exceeded 2019 levels with Saturday seeing sales 29% higher and Sunday 22% higher than the same days in 2019.

Restaurant sales compared to 2019

Christian Mouysset, CEO and Co-founder of Tenzo expressed, 'Clearly people are very excited about going back to restaurants and the spectacular weather has only helped fuel sales that were ahead of expectations!'

Looking at sales for the week of April 12th to 18th compared to the week prior (April 5th to 11th) restaurants with like-for-like data saw large improvements. Monday was the only exception as the previous Monday was a bank holiday.

Restaurant sales for week of April 12th vs April 5th

